

The Department of Zoology's

Equalities & Wellbeing Guest Lecture 2016

Prof Michelle Ryan

Professor of Social and Organisational Psychology
University of Exeter

Women and minority groups continue to be under-represented in particular sectors, such as science and policing, and in leadership roles. Michelle will explore this phenomenon and show that women do not choose to opt-out due to an innate lack of ambition or commitment, but rather their ambition tends to erode over time and with experience. Implications for policy and practice will be discussed.

Is there an opt-out revolution?

Understanding how context shapes women's ambition

2pm - Tuesday 26th January

Main Lecture Theatre, Department of Zoology, New Museums Site

ALL WELCOME!